Testimonial for Ariela Wilcox, Literary Agent at The Wilcox Agency

I learned about Ariela Wilcox, a Literary Agent in Del Mar, California, from two of her former clients, Robert Pryor and Karen Winston. Both are people I deeply respect and both were enthusiastic in their praise of the support they'd received from the Wilcox Agency. I was particularly struck by the claim that Ariela could coach an author through to a completed 300-page first draft in only six weeks.

That was just what I needed.

It also became clear in speaking with Karen and Robert, that Ariela was the kind of coach who was more than capable of personally adding value with her insights into the publishing business and her well-thought-out ideas about the author's own subject matter.

That this was true became clear early in our working relationship.

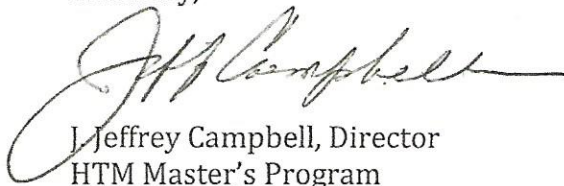

The additional benefit Ariela provided, at least to this writer, was her steady pushing of the conceptual envelope, her persistent – but amiable – efforts to help me more fully define my own intended message in my book.

Finally, there is no greater gift a coach or a mentor can give the subject of their support than the self-confidence that emerges at the end of a productive and responsive process.

Ariela gave that to me as well.

I could not recommend her more highly.

Sincerely,
